I agree that tomorrow is a good day to cancel.

Hi all,

I recommend that we cancel tomorrow's market. Over the six or so years that I've been doing markets, we have never closed the market and tomorrow, all our neighboring certified farmers' markets are staying open sticking to the rain or shine policy. For us though, being a young market and in the face that tomorrow is expected to have unprecedented rain showers - 2 to 4 inches, with a 100% chance of coverage during the market hours, I think it prudent to close for the day. On the flip side, I don't think canceling this one time jeopardizes us with the community and knowing that otherwise, when there is a touch of inclement weather that we will be open ....this is a different day altogether. The other markets are likely staying open because logistically it's too challenging to call off .....I've been on the phone with lots of our vendors gaging the temperature - they are all standing by ....also, we had a special event for tomorrow, with lots of community groups coming out, but I've been resetting them for other Spring events -- no sense having a bunch of kids and local folks out there in horrible weather ...thoughts?? If we do, I need to get on this straight away ...
